Affiliate Programs - What are They?

It's been said that affiliate programs (also known as associate, referral, partner, or revenue sharing programs) are one of the fastest growing segments of e-commerce because they create mutually beneficial relationships for the original seller and for the partner or affiliate.

An affiliate program is simply a way for a company to sell its products or services using contract workers without the expense of full or part-time employees. An affiliate is essentially a commissioned sales representative. You sell the products and/or services for a particular company and you earn a commission on all sales.

The nice thing about affiliate programs is that the company handles all the order processing, billing, shipping, lost order tracking, etc. You simply advertise the product or service - using an affiliate tracking code so the company knows who sold the product - and collect your commissions.

Affiliate programs are available to you all across the Internet. You won't have a boss breathing down your neck or monitoring your coffee breaks. You don't have to make cold calls on rude people who don't know you and don't care to. You don't have to suffer endless hours of telephoning prospects. See why affiliate and associate programs are fast becoming one of the HOTTEST ways to make profits online quickly?

Types of Programs

Original

Typically, for most affiliate programs, you simply place a banner ad, graphic or text box on your site or in your newsletter with a link to the vendor's site. If a visitor to your site clicks on the link and buys the vendor's product or service, you earn a commission. The vendor processes the order, handles collections and shipping, and then sends YOU, the affiliate, a commission check in exchange for promoting the seller's product or service.

Some programs don't even require a purchase for you to earn your commission - some pay for the referral itself! This type of program is known as a "click-thru," "pay-per-lead" or "pay-per-click" program.

This creates a win-win situation for you, the affiliate, and for the company! The seller gains access to a broader audience, and the affiliate gets an EASY way to make money - what could be simpler? Sometimes, an affiliate doesn't even need to have a website to get started... many affiliate programs provide the complete package.

There are also affiliate programs that pay you to refer other affiliates.

Two-Tier Programs

As affiliate programs have developed, new systems have emerged that allow you to earn money in other ways. Two-Tiered Programs are affiliate programs that pay you commissions for the sales (or leads) that you generate, BUT they also pay a percentage of the sales generated by affiliates that you refer to the program.

This allows you TWO WAYS TO MAKE MONEY - by selling products or services yourself, and by referring others to sell the products or services!

An example of a two-tiered affiliate program is the one I'm currently offering at <http://www.topezines.com/affiliate>

At TopEzineAds, we pay you $20 for every sale that results from your link to our site. THEN WE PAY YOU $8 from every sale made by an affiliate that you sign up as a result of offering our program on your site!

Many of our affiliates are averaging one sale for every ten people, and earning up to $200 for every 100 visitors to their affiliate site! And it's ABSOLUTELY FREE to get started... talk about a win-win situation! This is quickly growing into one of the largest two-tier programs available to site owners on the Net today.

Why Join an Affiliate Program?

There are several good reasons why anyone who owns a website should consider joining affiliate programs:

1. Someone once said that "Content is King" in regard to web pages. If you want visitors to your site to become repeat visitors to your site, you need to make sure that you have interesting content. Affiliate programs provide news and information to help your visitors.
2. Affiliate programs allow you to add additional services to your site, while maintaining the theme of your own goods and services. By adding more value to your offerings, you will entice your visitors to come back more often.
3. Most Affiliate Programs are free to join, so you have nothing to lose by adding them to your site.
4. Finally, and most importantly, according to Jupiter Communications, "by 2002, 24 percent of the $37.5 billion of consumer transactions on the Web will be generated from affiliate programs." This means that, within the next two years, $9 billion dollars in online sales will be attributable to websites with Affiliate Programs!

I want to be part of that action! Don't you?

Choosing the Right Affiliate Program

The key in choosing an affiliate program to promote is in choosing the right one. In order for your affiliate program to be successful, you need to select one that complements the content already on your site.

If your website is about gift baskets, you'll want to choose an affiliate program that would be of interest to the gift-givers who visit your site. If your site offers information for golfers, you'll want your affiliate program to offer products for golfers. If your site is for Internet marketers and online businesspersons, you'll want your affiliate program to be something that will interest your audience. Get the idea?

There are many generic affiliate programs that offer products or services that appeal to a wide general audience, especially business owners, but that would fit on most any website. And since most affiliate programs are free, you can sign up for several and promote more than one at a time. An example of a FREE affiliate program for a general Internet business audience is the one at <http://www.topezineads.com>.

Once you've decided on the type of program you want to incorporate into your site, ask yourself the following questions:

1. Are there Terms and Conditions attached to the program? If so, do I understand them, and can I abide by them?
2. Is the program understandable... does it make sense? Does the seller make the offer clear?
3. Is there a commission for all sales? Is it, and the process under which it is paid, acceptable to me? For example, some affiliate programs pay only after a certain dollar amount sales level is reached - is that acceptable?
4. How do I receive notice if I make a sale, and do I have access to tracking statistics for this program? Successful programs always have some way for you to gauge your marketing efforts and keep track of the sales you are making.
5. What kinds of support materials are available to me? Many affiliate programs offer banners, ezine ads, sample testimonials and endorsements and other promotional items.
6. Does the seller provide a banner, or HTML code to easily place the info on my website? Better yet, does the seller provide sample ads for my use, or a sample sales letter?
7. Finally, and most importantly, do I believe in the product?

No differently than in your everyday business life, it's vitally important that you have a passion for the product or service that the Affiliate Program offers. This will ensure your motivation to promote it to your visitors!

Let's take a look at how TopEzineAds stands up to the challenge that those questions pose.

Terms and Conditions

TopEzineAds Terms and Conditions are clearly defined on the website. There are only four points, and they are common to many affiliate programs:

- The terms of the affiliate partnership
- Ways in which the agreement can be modified
- Limitations of liability
- An agreement that you've read and understood the terms

Clear Offer

TopEzineAds is a two-tiered affiliate program, and the commission percentages for both direct sales and signing up other affiliates are clearly stated.

Tracking

The Online Marketing Money Machine affiliate program at TopEzineAds includes FREE tracking software.

Support Materials

Banners, sample ads, testimonials and a sample sales letter are all part of the package at TopEzineAds.

Looks like this affiliate program passes the test with flying colors!

Pre-Promotion Preparation

Now that you've found the best affiliate program for you, you'll need to find ways to promote it to others. Without proper promotion, no one will be able to find your terrific program or even know it exists. You'll want to promote it as widely as possible for the greatest exposure and to create the greatest profit.

Use Your Signature File

One of the most immediate ways to promote an affiliate program is by including information about it in the signature at the end of your email messages. Most email programs allow you to create a signature file, which is then attached to all of your outgoing email messages automatically. Many programs are effectively promoted in this manner. It's inoffensive, unobtrusive and it has the feeling of an endorsement since it's basically coming from someone the reader knows.

Sample Signature File

Jerome Chapman

Don't Delay! Get your "Online Marketing Money Machine" at
<http://www.topezineads.com/>

Create a "P.S." for Your Outgoing Email

Similar to a signature file, a P.S. in your email capitalizes on the fact that people will ALWAYS read a postscript at the end of a letter. Instead of creating simply a signature file, your "signature" would have a P.S. marketing message attached.

P.S. - I've already helped HUNDREDS of people earn THOUSANDS of dollars in my affiliate program. Wouldn't you like to join them? Find out how at
<http://www.topezineads.com/>

These are just two small ways you can get the word out about your affiliate program. Of course, you also need to include information about your program on your website.

Setting Up Your Website

Once you've chosen a program to participate in, you'll of course want to include information about it on your website. So, how will you make sure that your affiliate program stands out on your site?

The most obvious choice is to have a clickable banner that takes the reader to the affiliate program website with the purchasing information.

The original merchant, who sends you the HTML code to place it on your page, usually provides this banner. Some merchants have a choice of banners or buttons from which you can choose. Be sure to select one that complements your site, or is esthetically pleasing to your site visitors. If you click on the banner I've provided at the top of this page, for example, it will take you to the place on my website that explains the TopEzineAds affiliate program.

You'll want to place your banner for your affiliate program in a really conspicuous place on your website. The more visible it is, the more response you'll get.

Putting Banners on Your Site

Anyone with a text editor can place banner code into a web page, but in case you're not a technical person, or you've never done it before, let's take it step by step, so you can see just how simple it is. For ease in explanation, and to have a concrete example, we'll use the TopEzineAds affiliate banner and banner code for our sample.

By the way, you may have read information online about the ongoing debate as to the general effectiveness of banner ads. While folks are out there talking about it, I'm here doing it, making money using them, and showing you how you can, too! So if you want to join the debate team, you'll find plenty of places online to jump into the discussion. But if you want me to show you how to make seven thousand dollars in seven days or less, keep reading!

Choose Your Banner

Visit the website that contains the banner code. For our example, that's <http://www.topezineads.com/banners.htm>. Simply select the banner you'd like to display on your site. Be sure to choose a banner that fits the "décor" of your site - one that matches the color scheme and overall design will give you the best results.

What to Look for in a Banner

According to industry experts, a good banner should contain several elements. Think about these as you are deciding on which banner to display:

- Good banners must contain an attention-getting element, a call to action and a reason to click through.
- Bigger is better. Although there seem to be standard acceptable banner sizes, it has been proven that the bigger the banner ad, the more likely it will be clicked.

Banner Placement

Several online studies have been done regarding the best place(s) to place your banner ad on your web page(s).

1. The most recent finding seems to be to put banners in the lower right corner of the page, nestled down next to the two scroll-bar arrows.
2. Another consideration is to put them on your home page, if possible - banners placed further inside websites generally don't do as well.
3. If placing a banner in the lower right corner doesn't work well with your site design, the next most effective place to get readers attention is to place your banner centered at the very top of the page.
4. It's also been determined that if you place important content between two banners, the banners (which can be identical, by the way) will get greater attention. So, you might want to try one banner at the top of your page, and one banner at the bottom.

For more complete information about banner ad placement, you might want to look at a well-documented, detailed study conducted by webreference.com.

Copy and Paste the Banner Code

Okay, you've decided which banner to use, and you've determined the best place to put it on your website. Now, you'll need to copy the code. Highlight the banner code using your mouse and copy the text to your clipboard.

The easiest way to do this is to place your cursor on the first letter of the code, hold your left mouse button and drag your mouse to the last letter of the code. Click your right mouse button. Click copy. You now have the code available for placing in your document.

For example, copy the code for the first banner shown.

<A href="http://www.topezineads.com/cgi-bin/affiliate/b.cgi/xxx/">

To paste the code, simply open your web page in a text editor program. There is a great shareware program called TextPad, which is available for free download at .

Place your cursor in the place you'd like your banner to appear. Then paste the code. The simplest way is to click your right mouse button, then click paste. Your banner code is in place!

Include YOUR Affiliate ID!

This is the most important step in placing banner or text links on your website! Be SURE you include YOUR affiliate ID in place of the X's shown. Otherwise, you won't get credit for the sale! For example, if your ID is 688, your code would look like this:

```
<A href="http://www.topezineads.com/cgi-bin/affiliate/b.cgi/688/">

Your affiliate code is what allows the affiliate company's software to track your sales, so be sure it's included in every link and banner you put on your site. And be sure it's correct!

Sample Banner

This is what you'll see:

Now, when anyone clicks on this banner, they'll be taken to YOUR affiliate page and if they sign up, YOU will receive $20 for the sale! What could be simpler?

Text Links

Alternatively, if you don't want banners on your site, or if you don't like the ones provided, you can provide a simple text link to the site. If you place ezine ads, or want to include a testimonial or endorsement for the program, you'll want a text link, as well.

Sample Text Link

TopEzineAds will let you average up to $200 for every 100 visitors! Instead of using a banner, clicking on this text takes you just as easily to the affiliate program information.

Get Organized

You may have enthusiastically signed up for more than one affiliate program. If so, you'll need to make sure that you organize yourself before you begin to promote them so you'll know where your ads and banners have been placed and what type of response you're receiving from each ad or banner.

Setting Up Folders

A simple way to do this is to create a separate email or file folder for each program to which you belong.

Create a new folder in your email program. Be sure to file all contact information about that affiliate program there, including:

- the merchant name and contact information

- the website to which you must send your visitors to earn credit

- your affiliate ID and password

- links for members only or affiliate pages of the website where you can find banners and text ads

- payment information, so you can easily determine at a later date how much money you're making and if the program is worth your time

- newsletters or correspondence from the company

You might also create a table using your database, spreadsheet or word processing program that will help you track each program to which you belong.

Swap Banner Ads

One FREE way to get your banner ad out to the Internet public is to participate in Banner Exchanges or rotations. There are three basic approaches that you can look into:

In its simplest form, a banner exchange or swap can be set up by approaching other people you know who have websites that target your market, and asking if they would consider putting your banner ad on their website in exchange for placing their banner on yours. Small and home-based business websites target a wide range of individuals, so almost any business can find a variety of sites to approach about banner swaps. You will want to be sure that the products offered are not competitive, and of course, try to negotiate placement of your banner in an effective spot!

A little more complex, and not quite as effective, is participation in commercial banner exchanges. You might want to check out a few of the more popular networks:

Link Exchange is the most well-known banner exchange program. You won't surf the web for many days before coming across a Link Exchange banner.

Traffic Exchange is a free service created to drive traffic to your website. The way it works is simple - you display banners on your website for other members in the network and they display your banner on their website in return.

HyperBanner helps you exchange banner ads with other businesses around the globe. This is a powerful method of attracting Web traffic. Sharing banners on your site instantly gains your banner access to free advertisements on the websites of others.

Many commercially based banner swap programs allow you to use more than one banner design, give you tracking software, and allow you to choose the kinds of sites you want your banner displayed on (again, so you can reach your target market). In addition, you can usually choose the kinds of banners you're willing to display on your page (so you are not compelled to display any banners that may be offensive to you, or in competition with your site).

Member Banner Swaps

Also, many online communities offer free in-house banner rotations in which you may be able to participate. For example, if you are a work-at-home mom (WAHM) and a member of discussion groups or email lists with others in the same category, ask if there are banner rotations for members.

Caution About Banner Swaps

Hopefully, you realize that not all banners are created equally. Many banners are large graphic files which will load slowly and increase the download time of your website. Others are of shoddy workmanship. Still others promote scams and pornography. You'll want to be selective in, not only the style of banners you place on your website, but also in the programs that they advertise.

Also, placing more than two banners - one at the top of the page, and one at the bottom of the page - gives your website an amateurish and unprofessional look and should be avoided at all costs.

Write Informative Articles

One of the most effective promotional tools available to you as an affiliate is writing free articles that you can post on your website, publish in your free newsletter or submit to other ezine publishers for reprint.

You'll want to be sure that you include a resource box with every article you submit for publication and that you don't allow anyone to publish your article without it. Your resource box is your payment for providing them with free content for their publications. Your resource box should include the following:

- Your name, email address and/or your website URL
- Copyright information
- A short biography

The purpose of a resource box is to entice readers to visit your website to learn more about you and your products and services, and hopefully, to encourage them to buy from you!

You're the Expert!

The most important thing to remember when writing articles for your newsletter or for others is to write about what you know!

If your site is about growing peonies, then write about growing peonies... YOU KNOW about soil conditions, how to prepare for various weather conditions, when to clip the blossoms, etc.

If your site is about car repair, DON'T write about playing tennis... unless you happen to be a closet pro and you want to attract tennis players to your website.

By writing about what you know, you'll quickly establish yourself as an online expert and your writing won't sound stilted or forced. It will sound natural and authoritative and will give your readers confidence that you know of which you speak.

Another Tip - Use a Simple Article Creation Formula

It's been said that people need to hear something three times before it soaks in to their consciousness. So when you're writing your article...

1. Tell them what you're going to tell them. In other words, give an overview of the topic you'll cover.
2. Tell them. That is, deliver on your promise of providing them with some particular information.
3. Tell them what you've told them. Review the information you've covered in a wrap-up sentence or paragraph.

Still not confident that you can write articles of interest to your audience? Use a simple, yet effective article template.

This sample article outline was adapted from a formula developed by Dr. Kevin Nunley, a professional writer and well-known Internet marketer. It should help you create quick, simple copy for your newsletter.

1. Point out a problem the reader has.

For example, in an article about green practices in recreational boating, you might say, "Most boat bilge pumps come on automatically from time to time, spilling the contents of your boat's bilge - oil and other motor by-products - into open waters."

2. Make the problem seem worse.

"Bilge-pumping has been found to be seriously detrimental to marine life, and many boaters and marine yards are frowning on it. Legislation exists to provide green guidelines to boaters."

3. Suggest one to five solutions.

"You may not be able, or willing, to stop your bilge pump from coming on automatically, but what you can do is keep your bilge cleaner. By using specially-made absorbent sponges, which can then be disposed of at appropriate waste facilities, you can cut down on the damaging fluids being pumped into open waters. Another way to clean up your bilge is...."

4. Sum up your information, and end on a positive note.

"This article has discussed ways to practice environmentally-sensitive methods of taking care of your boat. There are many products on the market today to help you in your quest to go green. "

Still don't think you can write articles? Hire a professional to ghostwrite your articles for you, or even draft your articles and hire an editor to polish them. There is more than one solution to that problem... ANYONE can be a successful online publisher if s/he desires!

A Different Kind of Article

Instead of writing generic articles within your area of expertise and tying them to your affiliate program in order to bring traffic to your site, you can also write articles about the affiliate program itself and how it works for you, or how successful it is.

This kind of article is called a review, and may be suitable for publication in a wider range of ezines than simply a general affiliate marketing article. For example, computer or Internet-related ezines may be interested in an affiliate program review. Be sure you don't simply write a sales letter, however.

How to Get Published

Keep in mind that the purpose of providing articles to other websites or ezines is ultimately to drive traffic to YOUR site, through your resource box, where you'll include information about your website, ezine or affiliate program. In order to do that, though, you must first provide interesting content in your area of expertise to another Webmaster.

Contacting Publishers

You'll need to find ezine publishers who will be open to receiving your articles or reviews for possible publication. There are numerous online ezine directories where you can search to find other ezines in your topic area. Start with these to locate publishers who may need content to satisfy their readers' quest for information.

There are many more ezine directories available online. Read Over 65 Places to Promote Your Ezine by Darlene Bishop for more ideas, or do a search on ezine directories in your favorite search engine.

Once you think you've found a list of appropriate publishers, visit their websites. Look through the archives (a catalog of back issues) to see what kinds of articles they have published in the past. Search for submission guidelines on the website. If none are listed, send a personal email to the editors, asking if they accept article submissions.

Submitting Your Article

Many editors won't read an unsolicited article, so you will do better to contact them first before simply submitting your articles. Otherwise, they may just delete your messages or ignore them and you'll be wasting your time.

Once you've located appropriate ezines, email them a simply note asking if they accept article submissions and if you could send them an article for possible publication.

Sample Article Submission Request

Dear [publisher - address this person by name if known]:

My name is Jerome Chapman and I have recently written an article about [insert the subject here, for example Internet marketing] that I would like to submit to you for possible publication in your ezine.

After visiting your website and reading your ezine archives, I believe my writing would match your readers interests very well.

Do you accept articles from other writers? If so, do you have specific guidelines, or may I send you my article for consideration?

Thank you for your time. I look forward to hearing from you.

Jerome Chapman

You will then want to create a mailing list of all publishers who have agreed to review your articles for publication. Then, as you write new articles, you can simply dash them off to each publisher - or to the entire list - and gain the greatest exposure for your efforts.

Be sure to allow the publishers the option of opting out of your publishers list at any time, however. You never want to be accused of SPAM.

Publish Your Own Ezine

Writing articles for others, in exchange for promoting your website or affiliate program, is only one small way to drive traffic to your site.

But instead of writing articles for others, some site owners have found that one of the single best ways to market a website is to create your own in-house newsletter or ezine.

You can build up your circulation by providing useful information to your readers, by making special offers, and by letting visitors know of updates to your site.

Here again, "content is king," so it is vital that your newsletter be full of interesting news and info, and that your visitors have opted in to your mailing list. (That means that they've left you their email address and agreed to be placed on your mailing list.)

In addition, a newsletter allows you to keep your name in front of your target audience on a regular basis, and gives you a forum to promote your affiliate program, and other additional ads, for more revenue.

Whether you publish weekly, bi-weekly or monthly, an ezine can become a valuable resource to your readers; they will look forward to receiving it regularly and remain loyal subscribers.

So you can see that creating a newsletter for loyal visitors to your website is really a way to develop a relationship with them... which, in turn, is the first real secret to Internet marketing - loyal visitors who become loyal subscribers will often become loyal purchasers!

So how do you go about creating an ezine?

What to Include in Your Ezine

What should you include in your ezine? Remember that your goal is to get your subscriber to read your publication - you'll want to include useful information and special offers that your readers won't find anywhere else. For example:

- Original or fresh articles on your chosen topic
- Quick tips and hints about the topic
- Reviews (products, books, software, websites, other ezines, etc.)
- Free product trial offers
- Links to websites and other products of interest
- News about trends in your industry
- Interviews with other experts
- Subscriber only specials on your products and services

Once you know your target audience, and you know what they like, you can come up with countless ideas for what to offer them. And don't forget to include information about your affiliate programs, and an invitation to visit your website to sign up!

Other Ezine Publishers

Other ezine publishers will often share articles with you, in exchange for a byline and a resource box. If you do a search on your topic and find articles that interest you, simply visit the author's website to determine if reprint rights are available, or email the author directly for permission to use the article you liked.

If you do reprint someone else's articles, always make sure you have permission, and be sure to include the author's byline and resource information, as well as copyright information. In addition, through mailing lists and newsgroups, you may be aware of authors who are willing to share their articles in exchange for a plug for their business. Put some thought into what you are publishing and whether or not you want to promote someone else's business, but consider it an option, in any case.

Professional freelance writers are also available online. You can search for "freelance writer" or "ghostwriter" to begin the process of finding someone with whom you can build a rapport to work with. Make sure you gather enough information to compare rates, styles and professionalism. Then hire someone else to write for you!

Now, you're on your way to driving more traffic to your site by providing your expertise to others with the ultimate goal of advertising your products and programs as an online expert! But first, you need to learn to TARGET your marketing to the appropriate audience.

Targeted Marketing - Advertising in Other Ezines

Targeting your marketing efforts simply means determining very carefully whom you want to reach, and then finding appropriate ways to reach them.

It would be easy to simply send out your article, or your message, to every publication that you can find. But that wastes your time and possibly the publisher's time as well - and it could be detrimental to your efforts in the long run, particularly if others think your message is junk email, or worse, SPAM.

Why is it a waste of time?

At the very least, it's lousy communication.

- It may not reach the people who could be genuine prospects - potential publishers of your articles, or buyers of your services or products.
- It doesn't attempt to solve the reader's problem, which we've already determined is a key marketing technique.
- It offers the least amount of response, which means you must put more effort into reaching prospects and get a smaller return. That's definitely not working smarter.

In order to reach as many appropriate readers as possible, it may be useful to break down the larger market (i.e., everyone) to more manageable groups - for example, according to geographic area, age groups or industry. This will help your message stand out from the crowd, and will help you target your articles and promotions to the specific needs of the folks you want to reach.

How Do You Target Ads?

Targeting your advertising requires determining whom you want to reach with your ads and finding ezines that reach that market group. For example, if you want to sell your product to small business owners, you would look for ezines related to business, Internet marketing, website promotion, etc.

To then find those ezines, you would search the ezine directories for publications in those topic areas.

Is Ezine Advertising Effective?

According to well-known Internet marketing sources, somewhere between $3-5 million dollars was spent on Internet advertising during 1999. Smart marketers wouldn't be spending that kind of money if ezine advertising weren't EXTREMELY effective!

Before we discuss the types of ads you can place, there's one more set of criteria to cover regarding how to decide in which ezine you should advertise, which will help you figure out the potential for your ad effectiveness.

Criteria for Selecting "Good" Ezines

1. Make sure that you, personally, like the ezine... Is it well-written, informative, and interesting? Does it flow well? Chances are that if you like it, others will, too, and it will be a well-read publication.
2. Is the subscription base 100 percent opt-in? That is, did all of the subscribers choose to be on the mailing list for the ezine, or did someone harvest the email addresses and sign them up without their consent? You DON'T want to participate in SPAM, so be sure that the ezine's subscribers are willing participants!
3. Is the content of the ezine related to your product or service in some way? You only want targeted readers to view your ad.
4. Is the ezine content original? Does the ezine appear uncluttered? If it is "too much" or uses "rehashed" articles, it is less likely to be read. If you've seen the articles elsewhere, chances are the other readers have, too.

So, when you realize what makes a good ezine, and you find an ezine in which you'd like to place your ad, it's time to consider the different kinds of ads.

Types of Ads

There are three different categories or types of ads generally available in ezines:

- Classified Ads
- Sponsorship or Top Ads
- Solo or Exclusive Mailings

Classified Ads

These are typically a 5 or 6-line ads, which are often placed at the bottom of an ezine in a group, much like the classified section of your local newspaper. Classified ads may be the least effective form of ezine advertising, as some readers have a tendency to just skim through them; on the other hand, lots of readers look specifically through the classified section.

Sponsorship or Top Ads

Sponsorship ads usually stand out from the ezine copy by being placed at the top or bottom of the ezine, and sometimes by being “framed” or underlined. Most ezines sell only one or two sponsorship spots per issue. An example of a sponsorship ad might look like this:

This issue of [Name of newsletter] is SPONSORED BY TopEzineAds, <http://www.topezines.com/>. Owner Jerome Chapman invites you to check out his highly lucrative and successful affiliate program for ezine publishers - find out how YOU can earn $700 or MORE in Only 7 days or LESS!

Sponsorship ads are usually more expensive than classifieds, but they typically generate a greater response and are worth the additional expense.

Solo or Exclusive Mailings

Exclusive or solo ezine ads are one-time-only mailings that are sent separately from the regular newsletter or ezine. They often include an endorsement of the product or service by the publisher or list owner. This is definitely the most effective form of ezine advertising because it is a stand-alone testimonial to your product or service. When you place Top/Exclusive ads, you automatically stack the odds in your favor for getting instant targeted traffic to your website!

Create a Mission Statement

In order to narrow down exactly what product or service you have to sell to your audience, write a short mission statement for your business. Think in terms of the standard reporter's questions - the five W's: Who, What, Where, When, Why - and add the H - How.

Sample Mission Statement

TopEzineAds was created to provide ezine publishers and Internet marketers with an abundant resource of ezines that accept top, solo and sponsor advertisements, including sales and swaps, in addition to marketing booklets and other special offers, plus a profitable affiliate program to help online business people create their own wealth in the shortest time possible."

Once you've determined your goals for your business and written your mission statement, put yourself in your readers' shoes.

What BENEFITS will your reader or prospect find in doing business with you?

Writing Ad Copy That Gets Attention

You already have all the information you need, contained in your mission statement and benefits list. It just needs a little enhancement! Here are two of the most well-known techniques for writing ad copy that gets attention:

1. Use "action" words. It seems to be human nature to respond at a gut level to verbs! Words like discover, build, find and create will get your readers attention.
2. Incite the reader to action by using what's known as command copy. TELL the reader to DO SOMETHING: "Act now!" "Move on this offer quickly!" and "Click on this link to order you copy today!" are all examples of powerful and effective command copy that you easily can incorporate into your ads.
3. Create a picture or image in the readers mind. "Want to make buckets of money?" "The sun is setting on another dismal day... another day that only saw three hits on your website. Don't sit there waiting for another minute!"

Incorporate these tips when you write your ad copy, and you'll almost be able to watch your readers ears perk up!

More Attention-Getting Ad Techniques

Depending on the size of your ad, there are numerous other ways to get the reader's attention.

Use Testimonials

You can talk all day about how wonderful your product or service is, but you run the risk of being seen as tooting your own horn if you do, and no one likes a braggart. Instead, ask someone who has purchased from you to write a few sentences about what they think of your product or service, or how they have benefited. Getting someone else to blow your horn is much more effective than doing it yourself!

If you do this, be sure your client understands that his or her quote will be used in your advertising, and get permission before you use it. Offer a link to their websites and you'll have plenty of volunteers who'll offer to let you use their original endorsements of you and your products.

Provide New Information

If you can, tell your readers something they don't already know. For example, at the beginning of this ebook, I mentioned that within the next two years, $9 billion dollars in online sales will go to websites with Affiliate Programs! You probably didn't know that already.

Use Headlines

There are essentially three types of headlines - like those that you see on the front page of your morning paper - that are adaptable for use in ezine ads. Three basic headlines are used to pull readers into newspaper stories and the same type headlines will pull readers into your ads. Adapt these for use in your ad copy, and watch the responses roll in!

Ask a Question

For example:

"Would you like to hear how I made $700 in seven days... with no cash outlay?"

Break the News

For example:

"Amazing Scientific Formula Creates Unprecedented Opportunity for Ezine Publishers!"

Share your Expertise

For example:

"I'll show you how to make $700 an hour with one simple letter!"

1HourWealth.com

Put it All Together

Finally, combine your great headlines with these no-holds-barred methods from the masters of attention-getting ad copy.

- Show your enthusiasm. Excitement sells!
- Use short sentences and easy-to-understand words. Did you know that even the New York Times gears most of its writing to about a 15-year-old's English language level?
- Become an authority - you already are one, and your ad copy should instill your buyer with confidence in YOU!

There is only one more thing you need to know before you start writing dynamic ads... that is something Internet marketing experts already know.

What is this gem that marketers don't often share?

That there are certain words in our language that bring an emotional response from us when we read them... and YOU can use these words to give YOUR ads and articles greater impact and emotional appeal, and to make them much more persuasive!

For example, the word "FREE" is probably one of the most powerful words in the English dictionary!

What are some other words that work on an emotional level? How about breakthrough, money, easy, cash, discovery? There are many more! In fact, here is a list of 175 words that will practically force your customers to respond to your ads.

Dear Friend,

The incredible new Online Marketing Money Machine shows you how to increase your web sales by up to 1700% or more in just a little over two weeks.

This one works! I used this simple system to quickly increase my web sales by over 1,840% in only 17 days. If you have a web site on the Internet and need to drive huge amounts of traffic to it in the quickest possible way... this is the most important site on the Internet.

Heck... you don't even have to have your own web site!

Why Is This Sales Letter So Effective?

Let's look at the successful elements of this sales letter that you can use to promote YOUR affiliate program:

1. The use of verbs (action words) throughout and emotion words - e.g., increase, drive, remarkable
2. The call to action on the part of the reader - eg., "CHECK IT OUT NOW"
3. The image created - eg., "if you're scratching your head..."
4. The new information - eg., "I have personally found a program..."
5. The enthusiasm - eg., "This one works!"
6. The short sentences - eg., "You don't even have to own your own website."
7. The voice of authority - eg., "OMMM cleverly leverages the most powerful feature in the entire Internet economy."

Ad Swaps

Just like you, there are many other ezine publishers on the Internet who don't want to have to pay for advertising if they can help it. But many of them enjoy a form of bartering, an online version of the old adage, you scratch my back, and I'll scratch yours, known as ad swaps. All things being equal, you agree to run an ad for other publishers in exchange for your ad turning up in their ezines. This can be especially effective (and lucrative!) if you spend some time looking for publishers who are willing to swap top or exclusive ads with you.

There are, essentially, three ways to start this ad swap process:

1. You'll need to search for other publishers that are willing to swap ads with you. This is easy, with a visit to TopEzineAds, where you will discover a GUARANTEED ezine advertising system to help you track down publishers.
2. Many of ezine directories list advertising information that may tell you whether a particular publication is open to ad swapping.
3. Subscribe to ezine ad swap lists by visiting eGroups (<http://www.egroups.com>) and searching for "ad swap." There will be several potential lists, so keep in mind your target market before you sign up!

Once you have a potential list of appropriate ezines that may be willing to participate in an ad swap with you, you'll need to approach the publishers by email, and propose an ad swap.

Sample Ad Swap Letter

Here is a sample letter you can use to approach publishers about setting up an ad swap:

Hello, [Publisher's name]

My name is Jerome Chapman, and I am the publisher of a weekly ezine called [Name of publication]! This email newsletter has a circulation of [# of subscribers] (entirely opt-in) loyal subscribers, and is growing every week!

I find your ezine to be equally informative and entertaining, and I believe I could reach more of my target market by advertising in it. Perhaps if you visited my website and checked out the archives of my ezine, you might feel the same way about mine!

I would like to propose a mutually beneficial arrangement that will help both of us increase our subscribers, and in turn, our profits - at no cost to either of us! With your agreement, we could simply swap Top Spot ads for a period of no less than three months, in order that we can both track the results of this arrangement.

I hope that you will seriously consider this proposal, and I'm looking forward to hearing from you!

Sincerely,

Managing Your Ad Swap

You will likely get several publishers to agree to an ad swap with you, so again, you'll want to set up a database to track the ads you're running in your ezine, and to track your ads in theirs. In regard to their ad that you will run, make sure that your records reflect:

- The content of the ad that will run
- The publisher's name and contact info (email address, website)
- The name of the ezine
- The date(s) that the ad will run
- Details of the ad swap arrangement

To make sure that your ad is running as promised, request that the publishers send you a copy of the ezine that is running your ad.

Managing your ad swaps is crucial to effective promotions. One really easy way to do this is by using the Ultimate Ad Tracker v2.1 software, from <http://www.TopEzineAds.com> It will simplify the management of your ad swapping arrangements, and help you administer your swaps efficiently.

Trouble-Shooting with Ezine Advertising

If, after a period of time, you discover that your affiliate program ad has not had the desired results, you need to consider why it didn't work.

Was it placed in among a group of ads at the bottom of the ezine? Ad placement matters a lot, and ads at the top of an ezine will have a far greater response rate.

Were there simply too many ads in the publication, and yours got lost in the shuffle? You definitely don't want your ad to be grouped in with a lot of others, or readers will tend to just skim over the section, and miss your message entirely.

Did you target the publication as appropriate for the audience you want to reach? If you didn't choose the publications carefully in the beginning, your ad may have ended up in a publication that isn't reaching your potential clients.

You may need to go back to your mission statement, your ad copy, and your correspondence with ezine publishers to determine what happened, and start your ad campaign over.

There's just one more vital question left to answer ...

"The Online Marketing Machine is literally the best affiliate program that Top Biz News has promoted. The income that was generated within the first three weeks was phenomenal! Jerome provided us with a killer sales letter and we started the marketing process. We promoted The Online Marketing Machine through Top Biz News, added a signature line, put a popup window on our main site and use the same sales letter on our free for all (ffa) link pages, plus we placed a few classified ads in other newsletters. Thanks again, Jerome, for giving us a tremendous product that sells like "hot cakes" and also a product that is very much needed in the marketing world!

"Needless to say, we have become VERY happy customers." My partners in Passport to Savings and I have been in the promotional products business since 1993, and our advertising budget in off-line publications was between $8,000 and $10,000 per month. In September of 1999, we were relative newcomers to Internet marketing, and, quite frankly the plethora of so-called ezines was a confusing jungle. Fortunately we happened across the "Top Ezine Ads" website, and joined your service. Within three months we found that by using solo advertising in targeted ezines we were able to generate the same number of sales for one-fifth the money we were spending in off-line periodicals! THIS WOULD HAVE BEEN IMPOSSIBLE TO DO WITHOUT THE RESOURCE OF YOUR "TOPEZINEADS" SERVICE.
